Celebrating growth, relations with Japan

For the Kingdom of Cambodia in Fukuoka

On Nov. 9, the Kingdom of Cambodia celebrates the 57th anniversary of its independence from French rule. Cambodia, under the wise leadership of the late King Father Sihanouk and today’s King, Norodom Sihamoni, has contributed to improving the standard of living and promoting social progress. Cambodia’s economy has undergone a rapid transformation. With the support of development partners, donor countries and the private sector, Cambodia has made great strides in development, resulting in the country’s gross national product (GNP) growing fourfold from $1.4 billion in 1992 to $5.5 billion in 2011.

The government has also successfully paid off $20 billion in external debt. It has focused on the media, education and health sectors. Thanks to the current government’s efforts, Cambodia has achieved the Millennium Development Goals of halving poverty by 30 percent by 2015.

Development helps both nations, all Asia

Earlier this year, Japan signed an agreement with Cambodia to privatize and offer the Norodom Loung Bridge project, which will be completed in a few years. The bridge will connect the region and develop the local infrastructure. We greatly respect that Cambodia has overcome the tragedy of the civil war that lasted for years, and achieved stability and development as we are today. This is the result of the strenuous efforts by His Majesty King Norodom Sihamouk and each and every person in Cambodia who are striving for peace. On the occasion of the anniversary of its independence, I pray for the future prosperity of the nation.

A month from now, Dec. 9, marks the 57th anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Amity and Cooperation between Japan and the Kingdom of Cambodia. The friendship between Japan and Cambodia deepened through such events and the strength of the bond developed through Official Development Assistance and various other activities is particularly notable when we compared it to that of other ASEAN countries.
