

Danish crown prince's visit

Frederik to tour Tohoku, discuss energy solutions

Since June 13 and until June 16, His Royal Highness Crown Prince Frederik of Denmark is in Japan to show his sympathy and lend support to the people of Japan in the wake of the March 11 earthquake, tsunami and nuclear disaster.

In the aftermath of the disaster, Denmark actively participated in the massive search-and-rescue and recovery operations as well as provided humanitarian support to people in need.

The Danish Emergency Management Agency (DEMA) also contributed with radiation experts and a Technical Assistance Support Team for the European Union's emergency mission to Japan. Danish citizens and companies have also made timely, significant and generous contributions, including free transport of international relief goods to Japan as well as large cash donations.

At the end of March, Danish Ambassador Franz-Michael Sk-jold Mellbin visited Higashimatsushima city in Miyagi Prefecture and handed over donations to Mayor Hideo Abe. The city is among the areas hit hardest by the disaster.

During his stay on Japanese soil, the Crown Prince will visit, among others, the city of Higashimatsushima. There will be a special focus on homeless and orphaned children in the city, and the Crown Prince will inspect the facilities for children established with the assistance of Danish companies following the earthquake.

The Crown Prince will hand over a number of donations, and will also meet with distressed families, rescue workers and volunteers in the area.

On June 15, the Crown Prince will participate in a seminar about energy solutions for Japan, and will also be visiting selected companies in Yokohama and Kawasaki.

Bilateral relationship

Japan and Denmark exchanged diplomatic missions on a reciprocal basis after conclusion of the Treaty of Friendship, Commerce and Navigation between Japan and Denmark in 1867 and have established a friendly relationship ever since. Both countries have close ties not only in the economic and trade fields, but also in the cultural and academic areas, and their friendship is growing at a steady pace.

The contact between Japan's Imperial Family and the Danish Royal Family also has a significant role to play for the two countries' friendship.

Crown Prince Frederik, the heir apparent to the throne of Denmark, visited Japan with a Danish economic mission in October 1997.

The first official visit of Their Imperial Majesties the Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko to Denmark was realized in June 1998.

In 2004, His Imperial Highness Crown Prince Naruhito visited Denmark to attend the royal wedding of Crown Prince Frederik and Mary Elizabeth Donaldson, which was celebrated in Copenhagen on May 14.

In November of the same year, Her Majesty Queen Margrethe II of Denmark and His Royal Highness the Prince Consort Henrik paid a visit to Japan for the second time as State Guests.

On April 20, 2005, Crown Prince Frederik and Crown Princess Mary visited Japan to attend the World Exposition in Aichi Prefecture and participated in a special program for the expo's official Denmark Day.
