Human security gains place on agenda

Former UNHCR Ogata to attend annual meeting to spur implementation of 'common policies for humankind'

Sadako Ogata, her 69-year-old former UNHCR commissioner, said at the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland, that human security is becoming an agenda item for the world’s political and business leaders to protect individuals’ well-being.

At the same time, Ogata, who served as the High Commissioner for Refugees from 1991 to 2003, said at the Davos meeting that Japan is faced with challenges similar to the global issues she experienced in her role, and that the country should be proud of its human security initiatives.

"For young people to know that the country should be proud of its human security initiatives, its economy being strong, especially in the energy-saving area, and its technology for safety and efficiency can only be seen in Japan," she said. "And, amid the world’s extension of that technology, young people must be taught at schools and homes.""
The quality of a Swiss watch neatly packaged in an airline.

Your Flight, Swiss Made.

IT'S THE SMALL THINGS THAT MAKE AN AIRLINE GREAT. At Swiss, we put attention to every detail of our service, from on-board menu to inflight entertainment programming: it all makes a difference. And with every flight we get just a little bit better. So you can count on enjoying your time on board.

SWISS is the only airline that flies nonstop from Tokyo to Zurich, in the very heart of Europe, with optimum connections to the most attractive European cities.
The world crisis seems to center on the fact that stopgap measures are nowhere to be found. In fact, we seem to be fighting with our backs against the wall, through a crisis of one kind or another that has been going on for some time. If we are facing a truly crucial and acute crisis, it is not a random crisis but one that is the direct result of the policies that we have been following. If we do not address this crisis, the consequences will be disastrous. The world is facing a crisis of unprecedented proportions. The world economy is in crisis. The world is facing a crisis of unprecedented proportions. The world economy is in crisis. The world is facing a crisis of unprecedented proportions. The world economy is in crisis. The world is facing a crisis of unprecedented proportions. The world economy is in crisis. The world is facing a crisis of unprecedented proportions. The world economy is in crisis. The world is facing a crisis of unprecedented proportions. The world economy is in crisis. The world is facing a crisis of unprecedented proportions. The world economy is in crisis. The world is facing a crisis of unprecedented proportions. The world economy is in crisis. The world is facing a crisis of unprecedented proportions. The world economy is in crisis. The world is facing a crisis of unprecedented proportions. The world economy is in crisis. The world is facing a crisis of unprecedented proportions. The world economy is in crisis. The world is facing a crisis of unprecedented proportions. The world economy is in crisis. The world is facing a crisis of unprecedented proportions. The world economy is in crisis. The world is facing a crisis of unprecedented proportions.
The opportunity to think about our responsibility

Mitsuru Claire Chino

I belong to the first class of the Forum of Young Global Leaders, created by the World Economic Forum. At the meeting of the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland, on Jan. 29, 2010.

"One billion of them suffer from obesity and its associated health problems worldwide, compared to those suffering from hunger. The world is witnessing the emergence of an obesity epidemic, which is getting worse. The number of people who are suffering from obesity and its associated health problems is growing, while the number of people who are suffering from hunger is decreasing."

"What an ironic world where many literally suffer from hunger while overeating, and an equal number of people are dying of hunger.""