Celebrating 150 years of Japan-Swiss friendship

Urs Bucher
AMBASSADOR OF SWITZERLAND

The celebration of the Swiss National Day carries a special meaning this year as Japan and Switzerland celebrate 150 years of diplomatic relations. His Imperial Highness the Crown Prince Naruhito and President Didier Burkhalter of the Swiss Confederation are both honorary presidents of the anniversary year, underlining the importance the two countries attach to this jubilee.

This anniversary is an auspicious occasion to highlight and further strengthen the close ties that have grown steadily in the fields of economics, politics, science and culture since the signing of the Treaty of Amity and Commerce on Feb. 6, 1864.

Economic relations remain an important pillar of our mutual exchange. It has been five years since Switzerland became the first western nation to sign a free trade agreement with Japan. The treaty has benefited many companies in both countries, consolidating Japan's place as Switzerland's fourth most important trading partner. Many exchanges and collaborations exist in the field of science and technology as both countries invest heavily in building highly innovative economies and research institutions. Japan is Switzerland's most important research partner in Asia, and since 2007, a bilateral agreement on cooperation in science and technology between the Swiss federal ron, Mario Botta and others). This is also true for Japanese architects in Switzerland (SANAA, Shigeru Ban and Riken Yamamoto). In the field of music, one of Europe's most prestigious jazz events, the Montreux Jazz Festival, has found a second home in Kawasaki. The Lucerne Festival Ark Nova, which opened last autumn in Matsushima, Miyagi Prefecture, in a mobile concert hall uniquely designed by artist Anish Kapoor and architect Arata Isozaki, is another illustration.

In 2014, Japan and Switzerland will write a new chapter in their history of friendly relations. In many ways, Switzerland is bringing the best it can offer to Japan this year. More than 180 events and activities are scheduled to take place in Japan alone, all bearing the smiling 150 year anniversary logo.

So far, this momentous year has been marked by the high-level visits of H.I.H. Crown Prince Naruhito to Switzerland in June, the visit of the President Burkhalter of the Swiss Confederation to Japan in February and the Economic mission led by Federal Councilor and Minister of the Economy Johann Schneider-Ammann in July. It has also seen the launch of large-scale retrospective exhibitions of art masters Balthus and Félix Vallotton. In addition, the world-renowned Tonhalle Orchestra of Zürich with David Zinman and the Orchestre de la Suisse Romande, directed by Japanese Maestro Kazuki Yamada, undertook widely acclaimed tours in April and June respectively. But there are still many more highlights to come.

This special year is an occasion to invite all those who play a key role in maintaining these close ties with my country, but also those who want to learn more about it, to join us in the events and activities that are unfolding both in Japan and Switzerland.

I hope that you will seize this opportunity to discover a piece of Switzerland in Japan and celebrate this anniversary with us.
