

South Africa National Day Special

Strong, equitable relations continue to thrive

LULAMA SMUTS NGONYAMA
AMBASSADOR OF SOUTH AFRICA

On April 27, South Africans celebrate their 27th anniversary of the establishment of a free, democratic, non-racial, nonsexist and prosperous South Africa. It was on April 27, 1994, that South Africans proclaimed for the world to know, that they shall be the custodians of democracy and human dignity. This year, South Africans celebrate this historic milestone of their national day against the backdrop of the COVID-19 pandemic, which has claimed the lives of thousands of South Africans and continues to do so. Nevertheless, the Rainbow Nation refuses to succumb to the pains caused by this scourge.

We celebrate our Freedom Day faced by various economic challenges, namely high unemployment, an economic downturn and increased poverty. However, South Africans believe they will be victorious through their collective efforts to build back the economy and build a country that is better for all its citizens.

We celebrate our national day with all our partners globally. Among those in the forefront are the government and citizens of Japan. The long-established bilateral relations between South Africa and Japan have never been as strong as at this moment. Faced by the COVID-19 challenges that negatively impacted our nations, Japan and South Africa need to activate trade and investment, economic growth and job security for both our countries.

We are convinced that working together as partners, South Africa, Japan and the African continent we will achieve the goal of building an equitable world order. As members of the Tokyo International Conference on African Development and the Group of 20, we shall remain strong in our endeavors to ensure the equal distribution of the world's resources.

South Africa celebrates its national day by recommitting itself to the priorities of the Economic Reconstruction and Recovery Plan as articulated by H.E. President Cyril Ramaphosa. South Africa also remains committed to the African Union's Agenda 2063 and the United Nations sustainable development goals.

South Africa is and has been home to many personalities who have represented and continue to represent the cultural diversity and harmony of the country situated on the most southern tip of the African continent. This year we are celebrating the legacy of Charlotte Maxeke under the theme "The Year of Charlotte Maxeke: the Meaning of Freedom under COVID-19." This year marks the 150th anniversary of her life as human rights campaigner. She and other selfless women of her generation fought against oppression at a time when such defiance was met with unrelenting force. Our history abounds with selfless patriots who paved the way for a democratic and free South Africa.

South Africa is about to embark on a massive vaccination program. Vaccines save lives and represent our best chance to return to our normal way of life. Let us continue to fight the virus while striving for greater inclusion and social cohesion.
